Description

In 2008, the corn yield in China was about 0.16 billion tons. Chinese corn has been a five-year high yield successively and enough supply for domestic use. However, Chinese animal husbandry developed slowly in 2008. Meanwhile, a large number of corn further processing enterprises lost money and a few enterprises had low operation rate. And because of the blocked export, the demand for corn decreases sharply.

Among the Chinese corn processing products, mineral primary products are the largest part however its added value is low. Products of high added value still cannot meet the market demands.

Another key problem in Chinese corn processing industry is the main processing products, especially the surplus of powder and ethanol products and low operation rate. Because of the large number of small enterprises and fierce competition, the industry needs further integration

The author has a profound understanding on Chinese corn industry with valuable first-hand information through interviews and abundant second-hand information. The report analyses Chinese corn market from production, consumption and import & export, etc.
